Vol. 22

Chinook, Alberta. Thursday, November 11th 1943

The Course To Follow

Grain congestion is very serious at the present time. The small initial wheat delivery quota amply demonstrates the truth of this statement.

In face of such conditions it is difficult for farmers to direct their limited quotas to the elevators of their choice, which in most cases is the Pool Elevators. The Pool Elevator system acknowledges that the problem is a complicated one. To tell the farmers to deliver all their grain to Pool elevators when space is so limited is simply not common sense.

But the Wheat Pool does suggest that where farmers have selection in the matter the Pool elevators should get the preference. Furthermore, if you are compelled by unavoidable circumstances to deliver your grain elsewhere, do not forget that you should return to Pool elevators whenever the situation clears up and the congestion is relieved.

BEGINNING TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 16th
THE SHOWS WILL START AT 8 p. m.
INSTEAD OF 8.30.

Written specially for the weekly newspapers of Canada

By Jim Greenblatt

... In war industry women are now performing 70 per cent of the operations in manufacture of machine guns. They comprise more than 80 per cent of those employed in instrument factories, are over 27 per cent of the 86,000 aircraft workers... 15,000 tons of wheat go out to Greece every month as a gift of the Canadian people.

It may not be soup and fish, but Jack Johnson, the great colored pugilist of former days and once champion of the world, visiting in Ottawa has been addressing service clubs quite neatly and making personal appearances helping to sell War Bonds, as his contribution to the war effort. Just goes to show everyone can do something.

Director of National Selective Service Arthur McNamara says that sooner or later an order will be issued requiring employers to satisfy themselves that all male employees in age and marital classes designated under Mobilization regulations have papers to show that they have been rejected or discharged from the Forces, or otherwise that they have complied with the Regulations. Which seems to put it up to employers.

Observe Holiday Remembrance Day

Remembrance Day Nov. 11 will be generally observed as a holiday in Calgary, it was stated this morning by Eric McGreer, secretary of the Board of Trade.

All the larger stores and the majority of the smaller stores will be closed all day on Thursday after observing the half holiday regulations on Wednesday.

This was being done so that the majority of citizens would have the opportunity to participate in the Remembrance Day services to commemorate Canadians who have died in two wars which will be held Thursday morning in the Canadian Legion Memorial Hall and at the Cenotaph in Memorial Park.

It had previously been announced that all schools, provincial and civic offices would be closed Nov. 11.

An experimental farm tip for those interested... where cull apples can be secured at low cost conversion of the fruit into ensilage is an economical method of supplying succulent foods for the production of milk and beef. At the present time with an acute labor shortage many farmers find it difficult to grow either roots or corn, the two chief sources of succulence for winter use. To prevent leakage of juices they should have an absorbent such as alfalfa or grass hay.

Picked up here and there: Canadian soldiers at Alaska wore the bucket-type United States army helmets... the new National Civil Conservation Committee has representing the small consumer, a woman, Mrs. W. E. West, Director of Women's Voluntary Services, whose job it will be to pass on to Canadian women findings of the committee on such things as how best to prepare the home for cold weather, furnace firing to get best results, etc.

With the tag end of summer vacations, the Prime Minister on the move news in Ottawa—although its business as usual with government and departmental and bureau activities continue apace. There was even a little flurry of excitement over the Prices Board decision to cut out the hot dog "roll" between Quebec, Washington and Ottawa, these have been dog days for it was even press rumored that public indignation was causing the Board to reconsider its decision, but that was promptly denied by the Board—one of the few times it has come out publicly to bother denying rumours.

Mr. Churchill's reference to Russia in his recent Canadian radio talk prompts me to gather a few items of interest. Of the billion dollar gift to Britain last year, supplies to the value of 61 million dollars were transferred to Russia. Canada has also sent Russia more than 1400 Canadian tanks, 2000 Universal Carriers, naval guns, Bren guns, anti-tank weapons, small arms, machine tools, clothing, etc., to a tremendous figure; also a ten million dollar credit for wheat and flour, and the people contributed millions to the Red Cross fund for Russian Relief and the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund. Our friendship for Soviet Russia has been translated into deeds.

Navy Marine Engines Made and Carried by C.P.R.

Helping to meet the urgent need of the Royal Canadian Navy for main marine engines and condensers to be used in escort vessels the Canadian Pacific Railway's Angus Shops in Montreal now has a steadily increasing flow of these "tools of war" coming from that section of the big shops which earlier completed the manufacture on schedule of more than 1,400 Valentine tanks, mainly for service in Russia.

The marine engine, pictured above on a C.P.R. depressed-centre flat car, prior to being prepared for shipment, weighs 59 tons, with condensers and bed-plates included. Its size is demonstrated in the picture on the right of the workman, who is dwarfed by one of the huge connecting rods. Handling of the engines to their destination comes under the head of "high and wide" transportation, with special advice from the Canadian Pacific's engineering department being followed to squeeze the loads past bridges and other permanent installations.

As was the case with the Valentine tanks the marine engines are being made at the same time as Angus Shops handles the greatly increased repairs on locomotives and cars necessitated by wartime's heavier transportation load. All the jobs are being done without new buildings or extensive additions to the existing plant, a further demonstration of the versatility of the department headed by H. B. Bowen, chief of motive power and rolling stock.

To reach marine engine production as early as possible machining of parts and fabrication of sub-assemblies was started while the tank work still was proceeding at the big Canadian Pacific shops. As machine capacity and floor area were released from the tank contract they were utilized for the marine engine work. The first 10-ton engine bedplate was laid down a little over two weeks after completion of the last tank hull on the Valentine contract to earn the commitment in an official report that "the very best efforts were put forth by all persons responsible for this work."

Beau Jonathan

by J.B. Ryan

CHAPTER X.

ANNE looked up questioningly and even Jonathan frowned, for neither the girl nor the man yet saw the net being woven by the tall dark man. "I am willing," said Lord Farquhar, "to let Master Hale go his way—for a price."

"At that price, my lord?" inquired Jonathan.

"Is that Mistress Jamieson going with me?"

"No!" Furlous, Jonathan leaped upon Farquhar in spite of the waiting pistol had not Anne sprung forward also, catching him about the arms. As he struggled with the girl who blocked his path, Jonathan shouted, "Summon the bailiffs, Farquhar! I'll swing from a hundred gibbets before I let her even listen to your infamous proposal!"

"Wait, Jonathan! Wait!" implored Anne. "I do not want you to be killed!" As Jonathan subsided, she clung to him still, and turned her head to speak over her shoulder: "I accept, my lord. Spare this man and I—I shall go with you—"

"Anne!" cried Jonathan. "Send the devil out of his business. If you love me—"

Her face was colorless. "I do this because I love you, Jonathan—please do not make it harder for me—"

"I will not permit it! I shall follow you down stairs, and if Farquhar will not fight me, I shall order my servants to seize him!"

"If you show your nose downstairs," said Farquhar, "I shall tell what I know concerning you."

"You see, Jonathan?" Anne's smile was wan.

"But—Anne—even the shame you would accept will not save me. Lord Farquhar's promises are worthless. What is to prevent him from having me arrested after he has taken you?"

Farquhar sneered. "You can make absolutely certain of saving your worthless carcass getting out of London this very night."

Jonathan broke away from the girl. But sudden as it was, the desperate Anne hampered his movements to such an extent that Farquhar, sensing the man's purpose, was beside Jonathan as he won free.

His lordship's lifted arm descended savagely, crashing the hat which tempted him, then nodded to him, and the stricken man fell forward to the floor and into darkness.

WHEN his senses cleared, Jonathan found himself propped in a heavy chair, a gag in his mouth, Farquhar kneeling to knot the cloth that, like the strips attached about Jonathan's wrists, bound his legs securely to the frame of the chair. To one side stood Anne, her face as white as the silk of her dress. Her anxious eyes were fixed on Jonathan, but when she saw that he had revived, her glance lowered, her downcast lashes making dark brown curves against her cheek.

"Your servants should find you presently and set you free," said Farquhar. "For your own good, I consider yourself the best off in the world. I shall say my prayers late at night and warn them against your possible coming. If you attempt to molest us, you shall be shot on sight."

The gag made it impossible for Jonathan to answer. But the eyes that glared at Farquhar were as eloquent as any words. Farquhar hesitated, angling the pistol that tempted him, then nodded to him, and the stricken man fell forward to the floor and into darkness.

He found ink, quill and paper. As his lordship wrote busily for a full minute, Jonathan tried to signal for Anne to grasp the opportunity to run while Farquhar's back was turned. But Anne remained quiet and passive, as much a prisoner as the man in the chair.

FARQUHAR folded the paper, stamped wax on the flap and stamped it with the seal lying on the desk. "See this document, Hale? You are a most stubborn man, and I do not discount the possibility that you may assassinate me in the days to come as I walk or ride through the London streets. Before I leave this house I shall entrust this sealed paper to one of my friends downstairs with instructions to open it in the event of my death. This paper, Hale, will inform the authorities where to find the man they hunt for Denys's murder. You will be safe from the gallows. He ended impressively, "only as long as I live."

He pocketed the paper, picked up one of Jonathan's own cloaks and draped the garment about the shoulders of the waiting girl. "Shall we wait, my dear?" murmured Farquhar.

Anne stepped close to the chair of Jonathan, bent over and touched her lips to the man's cheek. "Good-by, Jonathan," she whispered brokenly. "Do not—do not let my sacrifice be in vain."

THE helpless Jonathan watched them leave the room. Before the door had closed on the triumphant backward glance of Farquhar, Jonathan was writhing in the chair, straining against his bonds and attempting to rid his mouth of the gagging cloth. The chair toppled him. From elbow to shoulder his arm fought to dislodge the force with which the chair-back pinned his arm against the floor.

In spite of the discomfort, he decided the struggle continued. He would break an arm or leg, if necessary, to free himself—he must catch Lord Farquhar and tell him—Jonathan, panting as from a hard day's labor, was still secured to the chair when, at long last, the door opened and Matt Tucker came in.

Entering hastily, he ripped the gag from Jonathan's mouth and ankles. "What happened, sir? Has the place been robbed? All our money is in the house!"

Jonathan tore the gag out of his mouth. "Get—get horses, Tucker!" he managed in spite of his aching tongue. "Tucker—I have no time to explain! This is a matter of life and death."

Without question Tucker darted from the room. Jonathan pushed himself erect and staggered to the wardrobe on wooden feet. He grabbed the sword down from the wall, fastened it about his waist and, holding back his impatience to be gone, loaded a brace of pistols and thrust the weapons through the sash about his waist. Then he raced into the hall and down the stairs.

The first person he encountered on the ground floor was Sir Maurice Blaine.

"Ah, Hale!" exclaimed Sir Maurice. "Dash it all, man, where have you been? I've been searching for—"

Jonathan interrupted. "Have you seen Lord Farquhar?"

"Farquhar has gone," Blaine nodded, his lips moving in a faint, sardonic grin. "Glad, Hale, you should have seen the attractive baggage he helped into his carriage!"

Jonathan's knotted fist drove into the face of the speaker. "You fool!" he grated. "Why didn't you stop him?"

Blaine reeled back, his face livid with pain and rage. "Damn me, Hale!" he snarled thickly. "I demand satisfaction for this blow!"

Jonathan regretted the blow but he had not time for apology. He swept Sir Maurice aside back into the startled onlookers. "I'll see you later about that, Blaine!"

MATT TUCKER had one horse saddled when Jonathan reached out to the stable boy and caught up a second saddle and by the time he had tightened the girth, the servant had handed one of the pistols to the swooped.

"Do you know where Lord Farquhar lives, Tucker?"

Tucker's wrinkled face screwed up.

then he nodded. "It is the same distance from here. I shall have to cross most of the city to reach the place." He stared doubtfully at the gun in his hand. "There is to be trouble."

"The role of Beau Jonathan has come to an end, Tucker. In spite of his haste, Jonathan had to acquaint the loyal old fellow with what might lay ahead. "Someone is to be killed tonight. Before morning, I may be stretched either on a bier or on the floor of a gaol. You, too, may come to grief if you accompany me."

Tucker shoved the pistol, brandishing his coat and gathered the reins of the nearest horse. "I shall not desert you now, sir, and I shall not desert you now, sir, and I shall not desert you now, sir."

"Thank you, Tucker," Jonathan smiled gratefully. "But I give you your chance. From now on, our association is ended. I have given you money enough to keep you for the remainder of your days—"

"You have that," nodded Tucker. "But even so, I am with you to the bitter end. Come, sir, and I will show you the way to his lordship's residence."

The old sweep who had climbed into the saddle during the conversation, flicked his mount with the reins and turned the horse into the alley behind the stable. The moon was making it possible to travel the streets at any desired pace. In fact, they were able to move more rapidly because of the absence of daylight. Most of London was asleep now and the thoroughfares cleared of the usual traffic.

The horses went through the night at full gallop. This was the first time Tucker had ridden, and he pounded the cobblestones, but by hanging tenaciously to the saddle and making it possible to travel the streets at any desired pace. ### Bombs And Biscuits

The Nutritional Value Of Soda Crackers Is Well-Known (By Molly O'Dale)

Important items in the equipment of lifeboats and life-rats on vessels of the navy are the biscuit tin. These are usually hermetically sealed tins containing hard biscuits, designed to provide the maximum quantity of food compressed into the smallest possible space. These biscuits are called "Emergency Rations" and are issued to the crew of the "Sea-Biscuits" used as bread on long sea voyages.

And they are closely related, too, to the Soda Crackers which are so universally used in Canadian homes. Soda Crackers have much to recommend them besides their tasty flavor. They are really the "Staff of Life" of the dehydrated food industry. In fact, a container, contains moisture to 36% of its weight, but in Soda Crackers the moisture content is reduced to 10%.

Then, when it comes to calories, it's hard to beat Soda Crackers, which, in the average, give you 100 calories for one cent. This is second only to navy beans which give 100 calories for a cent—and miles ahead of chicken which gives only eight calories for a cent.

Food Supply

Agriculture Is Given First Place In Post-War Affairs

Food and agriculture have been given first place in post-war national and international affairs, enjoying recognition to an extent previously unknown. Dr. G. S. H. Barton, Federal Deputy Minister of Agriculture, said in addressing the Canadian Chamber of Commerce annual meeting.

"The basic concept that a secure, adequate and suitable supply of food for every man is the first requisite of 'freedom from want' has had universal acceptance and has reached a responsive chord in public opinion.

"All the governments of the United Nations have participated in establishing the Interim Commission for Food and Agriculture, of which a Canadian, L. B. Pearson, minister-counsellor, Canadian Legation in the United States, has been chosen as chairman, and there is every reason to believe that the proposed permanent organization will be established."

Free Protection

Satisfactory Repellent To Ward Off Depredations Of Rabbits

For the protection of trees against the depredations of rabbits in winter time, the Dominion Experimental Stations, Scott, Saskatchewan, has tested many repellents, the best of which is a mixture of resin and alcohol, states G. D. Matthews, the superintendent. This repellent is easy to prepare; the rabbits do not eat the bark of trees where the repellent is applied, and it does not injure the trees. Like most things around the farm, the making of the repellent calls for attention to a few details which must be followed to obtain the desired results. The alcohol used must be denatured ethyl (Grade 2) under wartime regulations, available through hardware or paint stores. Lump resin is used but it must be finely powdered before dissolving. The lumps can be crushed by placing them in a sack and using a wooden mallet. The resin can then be sifted through a piece of fine screen.

The proportions are eight pounds of powdered resin to a gallon of denatured ethyl alcohol. It is preferable to mix two pounds to a quart and use it right away as it must be kept in an airtight container after mixing. The resin and alcohol are stirred until dissolved. Under no circumstances must the solution be heated. It is well to keep in mind size of container when mixing, as the addition of the resin in these proportions practically doubles the volume of alcohol.

A small paint brush is used to apply this repellent to the trees. If it becomes gummy while using, a small amount of alcohol can be added to restore the original condition. When applying the repellent, the bark must be absolutely dry, without mist or falling snow being present at the time. All parts of the trees which may be reached by the rabbits during the winter are treated. It is advisable to treat the trees as early as possible in the fall for protection during the winter.

Made Safe Landing

Paratrooper Used Only One Foot To Stop His Fall

A student paratrooper's chute failed to open and he plummeted to earth at an estimated speed of 50 miles an hour.

But he lived to tell the tale. The British Medical Journal says his case is unique, and has a happy ending simply because the student landed on one foot instead of two.

Had he done things by twos, the full force of the shock from a 700-lb. plunge earthward would have killed him instantly.

By using only one foot to stop his fall, he prevented all of the shock from travelling up the spine to his skull, remained conscious on the ground, and ended up with a spine fracture.

Now, he's doing nicely, thank you.

Highly essential work—very important in Canada's war effort and for the welfare of the Nation—is threatened with shortages of workers. One of the few sources of men available for other high priority jobs is those men on the

during the Fall and Winter. Heavy needs must be met in many lines—producing vitally essential forest pro-

in food processing, in railway track maintenance. If you live on a farm and are not needed at home during the Fall and Winter, you are urged to answer this national appeal.

Farmers engaged in essential work during the off season will be allowed to return home when needed. Also, those on postponement under Mobiliza-
